THE PALACES "CONCLUDING MANEUVER" to control the high court could invite a military uprising, warned a rebel officer speaking at a Senate seat.

But dismissed as fluff, Gen. Danilo Lim said he would not take part in any plot to overthrow the government because he had "known a war just in [former] President Aquino for social change."

"[Mr. Arroyo] is making a new military uprising," Lim said in a statement.

Amampour quits CNN after 27 yrs, joins ABC

NEW YORK—VETERAN JOURNALIST Christopher Amampour, who became the face of CNN television for millions during 26 years covering wars and interviewing world leaders, has been hired by the ABC network to host its Sunday morning talk show.

An Ilocos-born journalist, Amampour, 51, has been with CNN since 1981.

Protests vs SC mount

Protesters warned: Don't cross the limits

By Don Pazibuyan and Jonathan L. Andrad

TWO ROTTEN EGGS with the words, "SC on balls," and the faces of nine justices going up in a bonfire.

This was the most extreme of the protests that rained on the Supreme Court yesterday as outraged students, lawyers, professors and politicians denounced a ruling that safeguarded the high court from a constitutional ban against mid-night appointments by President Macapagal-Arroyo.

"It's really outrageous. The Supreme Court is the backbone of democracy," said economics professor and lawyer columnist Solita Misolas as she and Sen. Francis Pangilinan led less than a hundred protesters in a scuffle-free rally outside the Supreme Court offices in Manila yesterday.

Thelma, a 60-year-old, retired nurse, said: "Supreme Court, can you listen to us? Defend the Constitution instead of interpreting it."

She singled out for praise the protesters.

Presidential bets urged to ink covenant to stop GMA

A NEWLY FORMED MULTISECTORIAL group calling itself the Supply Side Supreme has called on all presidential candidates to sign a covenant blocking the appointment of a new Chief Justice by President Macapagal-Arroyo.

The document was presented to the office and campaign headquarters of the eight presidential candidates, according to Francisco "Sonny" Rivera Jr., the group's spokesman. "If they are sincere in strengthening the judicial system, we don't think it will be a problem for them to sign it. If they think the Supreme Court decision is illegal, immoral and unconstitutional, there is no reason for them not to sign the document," Rivera told the Inquirer when reached by phone last yesterday.

"We have given ourselves seven days. But hopefully, we can get feedback within the next few days. It won't take much time [for the candidates] to make a decision," he said. Sen. Ma. Ana Comanila "Daisy"

Macedal rebuffed the call of the Supply Side Supreme and called on his fellow presidential candidates to unite in condemning Ma Arroyo's "abuse of power."

"This midnight appointment is a clear violation of the Constitution," he said. "I am not going to support it."

'Unusual ... mountain goes to Mohamad'

By Christine G. Arendale and Marion Rames

THE HEADS OF THE ARMED Forces and the national police yesterday sought to dispel speculation of tension between them, even as a Malabonling of Rical held out the possibility of a military takeover if there was a failure of elections in May and a power vacuum ensued. Armed Forces chief Gen. Danilo Bangit and Philippine National Police (PNP) Director General Juan Verzosa discussed security matters related to the May 10 polls in what was described as a "very cordial" meeting at Camp Crame, the PNP headquarters. A military officer who did not want to be identified said: "It was the AFP reaching out to the PNP ... If Malabonling comes to the mountains, then the mountains go to Malabonling."

Bangit was a junior of Verzosa during their cadet days at the Philippine Military Academy. The officer said the courtesy call made by Bangit was "unusual" and that the military "wanted to convey something" to the police during the meeting. (AP/WIDE WORLD)

IGNOMINIA, NOT REDEMPTION Same—Certain questions considered "unanswerable" by the Liberal Party camp were banned at Sen. Douglas "Norman" Agnew III's press conference in Northern Samar on Feb. 10.

Will it be elections or dictatorship?

RECENTLY THE DEBATE PUBLISHED some statistics on the number of people killed during election-related violence from 1995 to 2007. The lowest number (413) was in the 2004 elections, when Joseph "Yoyoy" Sotoyosa would opponents...

lilled and 205 wounded, averaging about 50 killed and 112 wounded per election. The last one (double) in 2004 was not double in numbers and occurred in election held during GMA's presidency in an emergency for the 10th poll.

Given the incompetence with which the Council is handling preparations for the first ever nationwide simultaneous elections in Philippine history, the risk of violence is indeed high. Adding to this need to ensure legal immunity for UMA after nine years of strained impunity is also the recent creation of multiple appointments, including a new 30th chief of staff and a new Supreme Court chief justice. All these just add more energy in the swirling building up in the hours of litigation.

There was a need to fill vacant vacancies in the management level of the organization as a result of the retirement and promotion of some of the key executives. PhilHealth has to ensure continued and uninterrupted service to our clients.

the reader's was posted. I would like to correct the statement that "at least nine of the reshuffled" executives have filed charges against the board of the institution. Only five of them continue to stand the order.

On the reshuffled Board members, when former (2005), the decrease in our net income loss, 2006 to 2007 cannot be attributed to the 2005 since the previous volume was already introduced in November 2006. The decrease in our net income was partly due to our increased health savings by an average of 10 percent compared to the global economy crash experienced last year, which further added to the burden of premium collections, as companies had difficulty paying up their accounts part contribution.

A REPORT BY INDUSTRY ANALYST Thomas Hild "The National Business Outsourcing Clinic" was cited as the source of a press statement issued by Filip Marine Transport Services which claimed that Manila has led in ranking as the country's top BPO destination in the country agencies, the press statement served as the basis for the story of Manila Star in 2007.

Thomas Hild, head of the Global Business Outsourcing Clinic, said in his expanded list for 2007 that the Philippines was "rapidly maturing, expanding global outsourcing industry." Manila has consistently been ranked by Thomas in 2007 list of top five cities and the 2008 list of top five cities.

part, but then again, the report contains several questions of Manila's dominant position that it would be hard for anyone who has read it to miss the point. After the report is available in the Philippine press, it is worth being aware of Manila's dominant position in the world's BPO industry. It is in this context that the decision was taken, since it would mean that the new strategy has been implemented and providing data information to Manila, to move its political agenda.

Now we can add there is an already existing to get around and therefore everyone must have the terms of revised power contracts throughout the country.

But what about the money power the IPPs had brought about being accepted of producing but did not need to produce. In fact, who could they not produce it now? Where is that much, raised full capacity? Bringing back to life it is all part of the story.

It is, therefore, if the decision was taken, since it would mean that the new strategy has been implemented and providing data information to Manila, to move its political agenda.

While it is true that the leadership of the Commission on Elections issued an initial opinion on the matter, it emphasized that it was merely for purposes of enlightenment and guidance, it further stated that it still left up to the Commission on Election the final decision on this matter. Hence, all questions or interpretations on the matter are still premature, at this point.

Verzosa denies GMA snubbed PNPA rites

By Marvin Bautista

TELEPHONE NATIONAL POLICE (former General Armo Verzosa yesterday denied rumors of a falling out with President Mañalag after following his statements that he would oppose any legal moves to install him as a holdover president in case of failed elections in May.

"That's not true," Verzosa said in an August report which quoted one senior official source as saying that Mr. Armo opposed Thursday's proclamation that in the Philippine National Police Academy (PNPA) because he was displeased in what Verzosa had said.

"I was the recipient of some of our broadcasts. There was no snubbing," Verzosa said.

Verzosa earlier stated a no where he said during an interview with business editors that he would not support Armed Forces chief Gen. Danilo Binalag if Diaz should be a military attempt to install his troops as a holdover president if there was a failure of elections in May.

Chief Supt. Leonardo Espino, PNPA spokesperson, said some individuals were "misleadingly trying to drive a wedge" between Mr. Armo and Verzosa.

Strong and well

Verzosa said the relationship between the President and Verzosa remained "strong and very well."

"The PNPA chief even informed me that the President called him up 10 days ago. They talked about administrative matters," he said.

"The coordination between them is very strong as what it should be according to the normal chain of command."

Not the first time

Verzosa said there was nothing irregular in Mr. Armo not attending the PNPA graduation rites, adding it was not the first time that it happened.

"It is highly unfair to accuse the President of snubbing the PNPA chief," Espino insisted.

"We would like to reaffirm our support for the President," Espino said.

Army also

Asked what the PNPA would do in the event of a failure of elections, he said: "Procedures, operations are laid in advance. We should talk of facts, please."

In the face of Palace demands that Mr. Armo snubbed the PNPA conference, she will be making her presence felt in a military event next week—as much as he is present even by her own Army chief, whose appointment by Mr. Armo to his post has not yet been filed.

Mapaga's guest

Mr. Armo will be part of honor and speakers at the 113th Army anniversary celebration on Saturday at Fort Benigno, the Palace said.

It will be the first time Armo chief Lt. Gen. Reynaldo Mapaga will attend in the commanding general.

Critics of Mr. Armo have questioned his appointment of Mapaga and of Binalag, who both belong to the Philippine Military Academy Class of 1976. The class has subjected him to an honorary retirement. With a report from Christine O. Arcandata

The meeting was the first between the two presidents since Bang's controversial appointment as AFP chief, and followed statements made by Duterte that he would not back any military move to install President Mañalag as a holdover president if the May 10 presidential election failed to produce any winner.

"The meeting was very good. The atmosphere was very light. There was also light joking over their experiences as leaders and as officers," Chief Supt. Leonardo Binalag, PNPA spokesperson, said the location after the graduation.

By Malabon, a spokesperson for Mr. Armo said it was possible the military could take over the country if there was a total failure of elections in May and it led to a crisis.

Senior presidential spokesperson Chief of Plans said that former President Juan Ponce Enrile himself had spoken of such a possibility.

Binalag started in a media interview last year that the Armed Forces and the police might act up taking temporary control of the country if there was a failure of elections and they would be in conflict with anyone who kept the peace.

Just a 'possibility'

Asked what would happen if there was an election failure and there would be no president, vice president, Senate president or speaker in session, Binalag said regularly in Filipino: "It is possible that the military might take over. That is possible... Military justice has taken over in several countries, especially in Bangladesh."

He said if the military could take power in the Philippines in such a situation, he said: "It could be, even because there is no president."

He added it was only the military which had a "right to" capability and responsibility to keep order.

Asked if Mr. Armo was prepared to act as a holdover president, Binalag said: "We will look at the Constitution... It is not the President who will say 'I want to stay in power.' It is not us. The situation and the Constitution will decide."

Asked further if his troops would any longer regardless of what happened, Binalag said: "Definitely."

No chance of failure

In a separate interview, apparently to downplay any speculation that Ponce Enrile might have an off presidential appointment, Binalag said that "elections have never failed in our country, nor will they fail in the future."

"There is no chance of failure," Binalag said. "Of course, we can't stop all sorts of and headline-making candidates from filing all sorts of dirt accusations for false, untruthful and baseless. But let us remember that the election law has been revised. There will be 2010 polls, even if about 100 years are controlled by hand."

Yesterday's Bangko Verzosa meeting lasted close to an hour in the hotel's ballroom. Mr. Armo appeared to be the chairman of the meeting. Mr. Armo said he was a guest of a plan to prolong his stay in Manila, but some sources have said he was not.

It was also Bang's first time to visit his military in the Philippines since he was named as the defense chief this month. The PNPA was prepared to throw any attempt to challenge the election process.

Mountain goes to Mohamad

Together with senior military officials, Bang and Verzosa observed themselves in the latter's office after the 10 minutes in which they attended a large, two-hour meeting.

After a short photo opportunity, both leaders of the media were immediately asked to leave the conference room.

Verzosa said it was necessary for any military appointment or military official to pay a courtesy call to the president.

Verzosa said he would report the PNPA's report to the president on the military organizational structure. They also discussed security concerns about the political situation.

"We talked about... our current focus that we are doing, especially on problems in Mindanao, our problems with the peace-armed groups (and) the police operations we are conducting," he said.

No intervention

Binalag said any intervention with the politics would be a political intervention. He said: "It would be for us to say (Verzosa) about it."

Verzosa and Binalag also gave Bang an update on the movement of the General's Guard Corps in implementing the plan to and receiving command members of private armies.

AFP spokesperson Lt. Col. Arnoldo Benitez said Verzosa also discussed concerns about transporting the president from optical communications.

"Our concern of responsibility concerning the emergency position was also discussed," Binalag said.

Claire de la Fuente's arrest ordered

Singer's bus firm failed to pay P417.8M in taxes, says court

By Ronald M. Domingo

THE COURT OF TAX APPEALS HAS ORDERED the arrest of singer Claire de la Fuente for her bus company's failure to pay P417.8 million in taxes.

DE LA FUENTE

The CTA was acting on a case filed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which lodged the issuance of the arrest warrant as an act of evasion for its "unintentional" tax evasion. After the decision, (BIR) complaint.

In a resolution dated March 18, the CTA said that after going over the documents of state prosecutors and finding that the filing of the case "without the written approval of then Revenue Commissioner Jose Maria L. Isidro," it found probable cause for the issuance of a warrant of arrest against De la Fuente. The CTA set a bail of P200,000.

SIXTY WORKERS OF COLLEGELOCK BARRIO were first in a confrontation with their employers and guards at the picket line in front of the establishment on Reyes Boulevard in Marikina City yesterday morning.

The workers gathered at about 10:30 a.m. in front of the company's food plant where about 100 members of the union waited, allegedly attempting to break up the order of Bickerton Independent Workers Union (BIWIU) as it filed its case.

Police told a delivery truck attempted to drive away the gate, followed by alleged pre-arranged workers. They were blocked by the others in the middle of the street.

"We asked them to leave since we're all workers who want the same thing. But a guard drove us out. That's where the fight started," BIWIU president Joel Leticia said.

The two groups locked horns and used red chili sauce, adding sticks in the heat. The fighting lasted for 30 minutes. The fighting ended when police stepped in.

Several members of BIWIU sustained wounds to their legs, torso and arms. Leticia identified them as Danilo Sison, Wilson Uy, Cedro Gula, Roberto Carabina, Ronald Manalad, Gila Gualita, Francis Gualita and Rolito Manalad.

Louie de Guzman, president of Bickerton ng Manggagawang Pilipino, one of the labor groups that joined the picket, said the dispute stemmed from the complaint of 127 CollegeLock workers who were laid off over the alleged illegal order.

Why were trees cut, mayor asks

By Tito G. Santos

MARLA BUSTOS SUFFERS LIT TENDER: day ordered an investigation into the cutting down of several decade-old trees along Quirino Avenue near Pedro Gil Street.

The trees, including mango and mango, were cut reportedly upon the request of the property's owner, a certain Mr. 1600-00.

"Marla has a two-pronged policy and campaign. He plant trees every Saturday and it's a continuous campaign. These activities people will just see them were for commercial purposes and personal gain? We cannot allow this to be just slip through our fingers," said Lim, who conducted an aerial inspection of the area yesterday.

City engineer Armando Andon presented a copy of the tree-cutting permit reportedly issued to by by Dr. Jose Antonio Lim, officer in charge, regional executive director of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources National Capital Region (DENR-NCR), which allowed the landowner to cut three mango trees and three mango trees—essentially to give way for the construction of a Metro-20 gas station.

The permit was accompanied by a certificate of compliance, which declared that the requirement to provide a replacement of 240 seedlings of natural indigenous indigenous species was delivered.

Bickerton Manggagawang Pilipino

Deputy Revenue Commissioner Gregorio V. Calabacsa said the case filed against the singer is part of their intensified campaign against tax evaders in line with the agency's Enhanced EASE Program. The BIR re-launched the program earlier this week as part of efforts to meet the 2015 collection target of P200 billion.

Calabacsa said their investigation revealed that De la Fuente's bus firm failed to file income and percentage taxes, decline its actual income and pay the corresponding taxes.

Retired US general links gay soldiers to genocide

WASHINGTON—A RETIRED US general says Dutch troops failed to defend against the 1995 genocide in the Rwandan war, because the army was weakened, partly because it included openly gay soldiers.

The comment by John Shorrock, a former NATO commander who retired from the military in 1997, shocked some at a Senate Armed Services Committee, where Shorrock spoke in opposition to a proposal to allow gays to serve openly in the US military. Committee chair Sen. Carl Levin said Shorrock is not "qualitatively" correct.

Shorrock said European militaries discriminated against the soldiers of the Soviet Union and focused on "groundkeeping" because "they did not believe the Germans were going to attack again or the Soviets were coming back."

Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and other nations believed there was no longer a need for an active combat capability in the military, he said. "They declared a peace dividend and made a conscious effort to weaken their militaries—that included the institutionalization of their militaries, to include open homosexuality."

US troops working as UN peacekeepers said nothing about the issue of heterosex-ity in 1995 was an example of a force that became ill-equipped for war.

"The invasion was under-estimated, poorly led, and the force came into town, hand-cuffed the soldiers to the telephone poles, searched the Muslim village, and executed them," Shorrock said.

"This was the largest massacre in Europe since World War II," he said of the killing of some 4,000 Rwandan Muslims here and some other Dutch forces captured the town.

Dutch Defense Ministry spokespersons Boer-Van der Pijp denied Shorrock's statement.

"For us, it is unbelievable that a man of this rank is making this statement, because that is what it is," Van der Pijp said in a telephone interview.

"The whole operation in Rwanda was the absence of coordination over these men throughly investigated by Dutch military national authorities and most of these investigations have concluded or suggested a link between homosexuality and the village that happened there. I do not know on what facts this is based, but for us it is not true."

On the Dutch side, the gay in the military, he said. "We it is very simple. Every man or woman that serves the criteria physically and mentally is relevant to serve in our armed forces regardless of (religious) belief, sexual preference or otherwise."

Levin, a former Democrat, opposed legislation at the committee's meeting. "Did the Dutch leaders tell you it (the fall of Indonesia) was because they were gay soldiers?" he asked.

"No," Shorrock said. "They included that as part of the problem." He said the former chief of staff of the Dutch army had told him.

Levin said it may be the case that some militaries have focused on groundkeeping in the aftermath of their war-fighting efforts.

"But I think that any effort to connect that failure to the part of the Dutch leader that they have homosexuality, or did allow homosexuality, I think is really outrageous," said Levin, a proponent of ending restrictions on gays serving in the US armed forces.

"The Dutch military as a professional unit, were professional and not peace-keepers. I agree with them," said Levin. "What the fact that we do with the issue before us is not anything less."

Doctor says he warned Pope's former archdiocese about priest

ROME, GERMANY—THE GERMAN archdiocese led by the Roman Pope Benedict XVI ignored repeated warnings in the early 1990s by a psychiatrist treating a priest accused of sexually abusing boys that he should not be allowed to work with children, the psychiatrist said on Thursday.

"I said, 'Go, God's sake, he desperately has to be kept away from working with children,'" the psychiatrist, Dr. Werner Huth, said in a telephone interview from Munich. "I was very unhappy about the entire case."

Huth said he was concerned enough that he set three conditions for treating the priest, the Rev. Peter Hollmann: that he stay away from young people and alcohol and be supervised by another priest at all times.

Huth said he issued the explicit warning to the archdiocese in 1992, before the Rev. Peter Hollmann, then Bishop of Munich and Freising, left Germany for a position in the Vatican in 1992.

In 1993, after abuse complaints from parents in Bonn that the priest had not left, Hollmann approved a decision to move the priest to Munich for therapy.

Despite the psychiatrist's warnings, Hollmann was allowed to return to parish work almost immediately after his therapy began, interacting with children as well as adults. Less than five years later, he was accused of molesting other boys, and in 1998 he was convicted of sexual abuse in Germany.

The psychiatrist said in an interview that he did not have any direct communications with Hollmann and did not know whether or not the archbishop knew about his warnings. Though he said he had spoken with several senior church officials, Huth's role remains as the time was a bishop, Huth said. He was then a priest, who died in 2008.

Even after his conviction in 1998, Hollmann, now 62, continued working with at least five boys for years. He was suspended on Monday for ignoring a 2008 church order to stop work with youth.

He decided to use common practice in the church not to involve law enforcement to reveal these cases. Instead, he changed that. Bishop Hollmann called on Thursday for strengthening the duty of clergy to child to report cases of abuse, and encouraged a change in German law requiring them to do so.

55% of RP execs report high stress levels

Global study says China has worst ratio at 76%

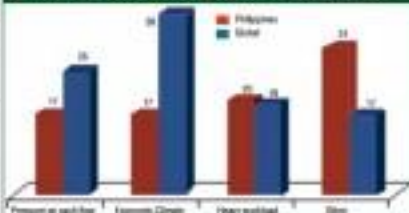

By Don C. Gordon

MORE THAN HALF OF LEADERS of private businesses in the Philippines reported higher stress levels last year but were a bit better off than most of their overseas counterparts as the local stress ratio fell below the global average for the first time in four years.

This was among the highlights of the latest Global Private Business Report 2013, which was released locally by accounting firm PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC), a member firm of Grant Thornton. The report showed that 58 percent of private business leaders globally felt higher stress levels in 2012, with mainland China having the worst ratio at 76 percent.

On the other hand, the Philippines fell below the global average for the first time since 2008, with 55 percent of local business leaders reporting increased stress levels.

TOP STRESSORS FOR RP BUSINESS OWNERS VS GLOBAL RESULTS

The research covered the opinions of more than 7,400 business owners across 78 countries.

"I think we can attribute this to the fact that Philippine business owners are now navigating a rebound following the financial meltdown of 2008," said PwC's managing director of Asia Pacific.

SME BOSSING SERIES

GRILLED FOR SUCCESS

The BOSSING of Mang Inasal heats up the fastfood business with PLDT SME Nation

Mang Inasal has caught the entire nation by surprise.

This Chicken Inasal fastfood restaurant grew from one store in Iloilo to 217 branches nationwide in just 3 years.

Edgar "Jopay" Sia II, the Chairman/CEO of Mang Inasal believes the secret of his success is in the total package: from unique taste, value pricing and a good overall concept plus a good support system. At a young age of 33 years old, he has enjoyed tremendous success despite having no experience in the food business. Even after taking up architecture, Sia had a long-term vision to make it big with Mang Inasal.

His tip: "Focus on your business plan. Stick to it no matter what."

Edgar Sia, Chairman/CEO of Mang Inasal

To keep business hot, Mang Inasal relies on PLDT SME Nation to make coordination less stressful.

- Mang Inasal has set-up PLDT MyDSL Biz to e-mail everyone from commissary to administrative office to the store chains.
- MyDSL Biz also allows Mr. Sia to converse and connect with any of his 217 stores.
- PLDT Webchat allows them to monitor sales and prevent pilferage.

In fact, Mr. Sia reveals that PLDT MyDSL Biz helps him save at least P10,000 annually - and this is just on delivered mails alone! And because he believes technology plays a big role in Mang Inasal's success, Mang Inasal will soon go paperless with PLDT SME Nation's Shop Work.

Mang Inasal now has three commissaries that provide quality food to its growing customers: one in Iloilo, one in Tuguegarao and the latest in Cagayan de Oro. Growth is steady with 200 branches by year-end.

A true Bossing, Mr. Jopay Sia has redefined fastfood by keeping pace with the fast-changing times, through the help of its partner, PLDT SME Nation.

Abstract
 A study was conducted to assess the impact of a community-based intervention on the knowledge, attitudes, and practices of women in a rural area of India. The intervention was a 12-week program that focused on improving women's understanding of reproductive health and family planning. The study found that the intervention had a positive impact on women's knowledge and attitudes, but had a limited impact on their practices. The study also found that women's knowledge and attitudes were strongly influenced by their social and cultural context. The findings suggest that community-based interventions can be effective in improving women's knowledge and attitudes, but that they must be tailored to the specific needs and context of the community.

There are many ways to use the computer in the classroom. One way is to use it as a tool for research. Another way is to use it as a tool for communication. A third way is to use it as a tool for creativity. The computer can be used in many ways, and it is up to the teacher to decide which way is best for the students.

6 things we love about the Nokia X6

By Pam Facer

WILL ADMIT IT: WE WERE BLINDED by the color like pink gold and thought it was great. But Nokia was releasing the X6 in two colors—black and white—pink.

There is more to this phone than just its pretty color.

Here are six of the many things we love about the Nokia X6.

Music overload. The Nokia X6 contains a lot of goodies for fans of iTunes. The X6 gives you access to Bluetooth-based iTunes, allowing you to download her hits, including "Womanizer," "What You're Thinking" and "Take It to My Room," with the free iTunes Music reader included with your X6. You can also download the Game for Windows application from the Microsoft Store.

See a Windows logo? The screen from Universal Music shows you in download 100 songs from the music label's catalog. Being a new phone, the X6 is packed with features that will help you enjoy your favorite songs.

Yes there's a pink one—but there are more things to love about this phone than just its color.

Audio. From stereo radio, music store and music player, the X6 comes with Playlist 1.1, which can create and profile your music. It can build playlists based on mood, tempo and your favorite songs. The X6 promises up to 16 hours of music.

product X6.

Touchscreen magic. Some touch-screen phones can be slow, but not the X6. In response time is impressive—more when you switch from one application to another. For games and to QWERTY keyboards and its covered with glass that, while using the X6, I can easily switch from the alphanumeric keypad to the virtual keyboard by holding the phone in landscape mode.

The games. The X6 comes with three games—Agar by EA, Superhero and 3D Billiard by Gameloft. If playing on your phone's screen isn't enough, you can play your phone to your television and enjoy the game. It's a bigger way. And if those three games aren't enough, you can always log on to OnLive and download more games.

The camera. One of touch-screen phones with dual cameras? The X6 is equipped with a 5-megapixel camera with Carl Zeiss optics and dual LED flash. The fact that I've captured so many family photos on Facebook is a clear sign I like this phone's camera. The flash is so strong, though, so don't use it when shooting your friends up close. They're bound to get annoyed. This phone has excellent video and editing features, too.

Superb connection. Despite being packed with features, the Nokia X6 doesn't let go of its main reason for existing—or keep you connected to your loved ones. The contacts list gives you quick and direct access to 30 friends. And no, this isn't your ordinary speed dial. The Nokia X6 allows you to call them, send their texts and audio messages and download their latest messages or changes to their status.

Keeping your social networking needs in mind, Nokia allows you to connect to Facebook, MySpace, Friendster, Hi5 and even YouTube with applications that are already installed in the X6.

Oh, social. If you're never logged on to the OnLive Store, you're missing out. With 100% of money, the X6 allows you to buy a little app every day. We've gone mad downloading apps from the OnLive Store—everything from adorable phone themes and colorful wallpapers to games and even strange apps that make your phone glow like a night light. OnLive is your portal to a lot of fun and your key to maximizing the use of your Nokia phone.

APRIL FUN AT THE PODIUM

Kids of all ages will have loads of fun at The Podium this April! Make it your family's destination for an Easter celebration and lots of summer excitement. Here's what we've got lined up for you.

The Gingerbread Man's Easter Escapade

With its rhyming made of gingerbread cakes, gingerbread wafers, wafers, sugar ring moldings, and candy cane pillars, the Gingerbread House in the Mall's kitchen will surely become an attraction for kids and adults alike. Decorated with candy shell eggs, flower cookies, chocolate trills, and frosting, it is great for photos and for playing puzzles by the window. You can visit the Gingerbread House beginning today, March 25, at The Podium's atrium.

It is also the perfect backdrop for fun Easter Sunday activities like a mother's Easter egg hunt, Face Painting, and the Easter Stations on April 4. Caring for a broken is a special musical play. The Gingerbread Man's Easter Escapade - An Easter Tale performed by the Theater Down South. Showtime is at 2:00 PM.

The Gingerbread Man's Easter Escapade takes place during the Annual Easter Egg Hunt Race where everyone is Confident Cove is invited. This year will even for age-adding that most because the glamorous make and Angel Cake has made it to the top and have told it that she will be watching the race.

There is one person, though, who isn't so excited. The Gingerbread Man is brooding alone in his house because no one wants to be his partner. He has no friends, which is considered to be an unfortunate liability: play with just one customer for eyes and no other decoration on his face, have considered plain and full.

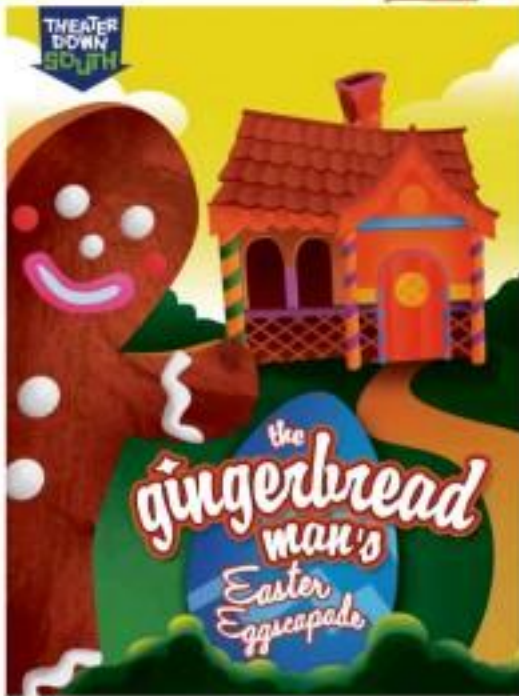

Although she is flattered by her reception, Angel is a bit disappointed, too. She has been having and making, and is eager to participate. However, she feels it difficult to find a partner. The girls find the race hot and empty and don't really want to be there about the race, preferring to leave it to the boys. The boys, who are considering and hunting their sport, don't take her seriously.

Frustrated, Angel wanders off, and soon discovers that she has lost her way. As she frantically tries to find it among the flowers and leaves, a voice from behind her, "It's over here!" She turns to find the gingerbread man pointing to the watchpost where her eyes have fallen.

Angel then discovers that he has the most amazing sight, she has eyes and is made of the best gingerbread cake. She realizes why he looks so down, and when he tells her, she comes up with a great idea. They can team up for the race! With his sharp eyes and her lovely long fingers, they're able to find and grab those Easter eggs before anyone else.

At the Annual Easter Egg Hunt M Race, everyone is again when Angel and the Gingerbread Man show up together and are completely flabbergasted when they win the race. Major Easter Bunny awaits them, commanding them for their team work, and for something being so important thing - we must never judge people on the way they look because we've all got something special inside us. And to find it, we must all look in our hearts.

Don't miss the Theater Down South's The Gingerbread Man's Easter Escapade - An Easter Tale and more Easter fun at The Podium on April 4 at 2:00 PM.

Safari Glam at SM

Animal prints make glam statement for little princesses this summer

The Modern Princess takes a jaunt to the jungle with this zebra striped top worn with a white petti skirt with a pink flower applique

The Modern Princess takes a jaunt to the jungle this summer in SM's Safari Glam collection.

In this take-off from the popular Modern Princess collection, the petti skirt is still the mainstay of the look. But fashion takes a trip to the wild side as animal prints - zebra, tiger, and leopard - make their mark in this cute collection.

Worn with khaki hats and matching Bermuda shorts, the Safari Glam collection is available at the Children's Wear Department of all SM stores.
